History

The USSSA, or United States Slow Pitch Softball Association was formed in 1967 when it was felt the slow pitch softball industry was being neglected by the dominant softball association of the time. Utilizing progressive rules and procedures, as well as an entrepreneurial spirit, USSSA quickly became a dominant force in the slow pitch industry and developed its desire to enter the world of additional sports. USSSA became a multi-sports association at its 1997 National Convention in Myrtle Beach, S.C., subsequently changing its name to the United States Specialty Sports Association.

Philosophy

The USSSA believes that all amateur athletes should be given the opportunity to compete in championship events in their chosen sport, no matter the level of their abilities, and that they should be allowed to qualify for sport championships, whether it be on the local level, or the national level. All championship events should be of the highest quality. All decisions made by the association are made with the best interest of the players, coaches, fans and recreation administrators in mind.
